Speaking of railroads, was remarked that they are now built on three gauges, viz.: broad gauge, narrow gauge and mortgage.

"This hot weather is good for nix," remarked a facetious young man in a horse car. "Yes, for pie-nix," replied his companion.

Said one man to another: "If it wasn't Sunday, how much time take for that lamb?" "I would if Sunday, I'd tell you," was the very proper reply.

One of the modest little farming settlements in Illinois is laid out in 19,000 acres of corn, 2,500 acres of flax, 1,000 acres of oats, and enough grass to produce about eight thousand tons of hay.

At Yonkers, N. Y., Henry Bates, aged

nineteen, was sentenced to the Albany penitentiary for one year on his confession of having broken into St. John's church and rifled the poor box of its congregation.

An old writer on manners says: When a woman would impress the beholder favorably let her carry herself with her

air of decorum and stateliness becoming to her womanhood.

Mr. Evans' sentences during his plea for Mr. Butler were of extraordinary eloquence, and he has given them to the leaders to keep fresh of his memory.

The longest sentence filled fifty-six lines of common newspaper print.

The president of the Eclectic Society of Kings county, N. Y., Dr. Napoleon Palmer, committed suicide, using hydrocyanide to addle his brain, and the liver to keep fresh of his memory.

The Evansville Ind. Courier tells us

readers of a bambino bound in a bunch of bananas hanging in a fruit store at that place. It was of a fury black, and measured about two inches from the head to the end of the body, and had claws equally as long.

phosphorus, 116,053 pounds of camphor,

202 pounds of opium, and 297,313

pounds of unguent.

The only wonder is that nobody is left to tell the tale.

A queer bird made its appearance about Rintam, which is situated in the "candy killer," from the fact that it seems to be a deadly enemy of canaries. It is a large bird, and possesses a long beak, which it darts into the cages as it flies

against them, and the canary is either struck by it and killed, or drops from lightning.

One of our young men, he was baker. He said bread tasted ever so much better made by her dear hands.

This delighted her, but when she wanted a scuttle of coal and he suggested that she get it, the wife would feel so much better if the coal was brought by her dear hands, she was delighted.

On a street car the other day a boy

made a sudden grab among the straw, caught something, and, as he straightened up, he inhaled the straw.

He was greatly distressed, and he thankful.

He had a glass jar filled with innumerable insects, and when he frequently opened it, the insects would creep out and crawl over him.

He was greatly relieved when he found the straw was dry, and he could inhale it without difficulty.

He is still free.

COSTLEY'S EXECUTION.—A number of residents of Weymouth were present at the closing scene of the Monmouth river tragedy, at the fall in Dedham, last Friday forenoon, all particulars of which have been given in the daily papers.—
It was thought that Costley would make a confession on the scaffold, but his last statements were a denial of his complicity in the murder, giving the inference that parties known to him were implicated in the murder of Mrs. Hawkes, whose name he would not disclose.

Weymouth Weekly Gazette, AND BRAINTRAP REPORTER.

VOL. IX.

WEYMOUTH, MASS., FRIDAY, JULY 9, 1875.

NO. 111

None to Spare.

The following poem, although crude oil, is so touching it cannot refrain from publishing it. A father and mother, in stricken circumstances, were offered by a wealthy, but childless relative, a comfortable home if they would let him have one or more of their children. The parents were disposed to accept the offer, but when they came decide which child should go they broke down, as the poem touchingly tells:

"Which shall it be? which shall it be?"

I looked at John—John looked at me.

"Dear patient John, who loves me yet,

As I am old, and you are yet [etc]."

And when I thought that I must give up,

My voice seemed strangely low and weak;

"Tell me again what Robert said!"

And then I listened bent my head:

"This is the letter: 'I will give

A house and land with whom you live,

If, in return, from out your seven,

One child to me for my given.'

I looked at John's old garments worn,

The poor countryman was without sheep,

Or donkey, or clothing, than he had;

With the briefest words, and the tro-phes of their artful rroguey.

Professional Diversions.

The present pursuit of some department of observation, not in the direct line of the necessities of a professional man, always conduces to the integrity and health of his mind. In

The words of a great orator, "It calms, elevates, and restores the faded powers,

clears the muddled, clouded brain,

and gives the nervous system that directs their operations. Why do we sing? Because the respiratory organs are excited; the pores of something or other unnatural to a man. A cough is an effort on the part of the air-tubes to free themselves from some source of irritation. And so important are the organs of breathing to the welfare of the body, that the muscles of the chest and abdomen are put into action in the endeavor to get rid of the exciting substance.

Why do we sigh? The action of sighing arises from similar causes to those of yawning, but in sighing the nervous depression is caused by grief, while in yawning, the effort of fatigue. In sighing, the effort is to get rid of the exciting. The mind, wearied and weakened by sorrow, sorrows for a few seconds to contain the respiratory process, and then suddenly there comes an involuntary expiration of the breath, causing a faint sound as it passes the organs of the voice.

Can a Dead Man Groan?

Dr. Holland writes to a British medical journal on this subject:

"The possibility and probability alike of a groan after somatic death are sufficiently heterodox to ordinary credulity to induce me to record the fact of my own observation. It is, however, true, that the most remarkable case of such a groan is that of Mr. J. B., aged forty-seven, committed suicide by hanging. After he had been very effectually suspended for an hour, was cut down by

was slackened from the neck, air escaped from the lungs, and the heart stopped.

He died in his father's arms.

"No, John," said

I can not, will not, let him go."

And so we wrote, in courteous way,

We could not drive one child away;

And afterward tol lighted candle,

Thinking of that we dreamed,

Happy in truth that not one face

Was mislead from its accustomed place:

Thankful to work for all the even,

Trusting the rest to One in heaven.

AN ITALIAN LEGEND.

Three robbers were walking by the roadside, one evening, after a day of profitless anxiety.

"It's a pity," said one of them,

"we are no better than this,

I am unwilling to let a day pass without some gain."

"There's a chance," said another, and as they looked up they saw on the brow of the hill before them, a man riding a donkey, and by string, leading a sheepherd who attended to its neck.

"I will catch that sheep," said the first of the robbers.

"You cannot," said the second; "do you not perceive the cord and the bell?"

"I see them," said the first; "but they present no obstacle to me." I'll steal that sheep," said the second,

"I'll catch the donkey," said the third.

"What?" said the third, "stole a man's donkey from under him?"

"You cannot know better," said

the second.

"Yes," said the third, "I'll steal all the clothes the man has upon him, or forget my pretensions to professional excellence."

"Bah!" said the other two, "you will attempt what you cannot accomplish."

"We will see," said the third.

The unscrupulous man was plodding along without thoughts of injury, when the first approached and cut the cord

and tacked the bell to the donkey's tail, whilst his jingle hung in the air.

In due time the man turned behind to see what the robbers did, and to his surprise found it was gone. In dismay and distress he appealed to the first person he met, and if he had seen any one with a she-

"Yes," replied the person, "I saw a man chancing down the hillside with such a prize; but I thought it was his own."

Correspondence of the Gazette.

LETTER FROM WASHINGTON.

FROM THE DOOR OF THE CAPITOL.

WASHINGTON, July 2d, 1875.

With the mercury up among the nifties, in fact decidedly well up mid with a burning sun pouring down upon our heads, its sufficiency unimpaired by the fanned air of our parlors, we wonder what we are amending to weaken in our chirished, mustang upon fashionable dissipation and in the slightest perceptible manner of course to begin to sigh for the fresh pots of egg-truth to tell, when we are in the seat of the seat, also in fashionable European capitals, you see we are left corporatively desolate. Even among our would-be fashionables, our most cherished shabby genteel, the front shutters tightly closed, the windows dark, the curtains under cover of darkness, through the gare doors. Still as faithful, consistent members of the Can't-get-away Club, we suffer no hero's alliance, imagine ourselves contented, and like Reynold's crows, contented, though deliciously tempting is undoubtedly sour. Though, we sigh for the buccolic, and yearn to ascertain what the wild waves are saying still like the youthful Cossacks, we stand on the birthing deck, looking classically and heroically "adorn'd adorns."

How do we enjoy ourselves? Well we promenade our cool and shady paths, mirthfully the croquet balls over leafy lawns and open eaves, "execute" a modest walk down the Potomac's nothing to be hillocky and gratefully enjoyed, but never described—then we plie through the woods or saunter aimlessly along the banks of that most charming little brook yester Rock Creek, or when for an hour or two.

The shadowed clouds obscure the face of God and from mortal eyes the face of man. And so, for instance, we climb the hundred or two—we thought them thousands—light zig-zag steps and stand beneath the laurel in the dome of the Capitol.

We now describe the glorious panorama that stretches out before us, from this dizzy height we gaze in rapturous silence out upon the verdant woods and fields of two states, and trace in their blue outlines the mountain tops with overcast clouds above, while wooded heights we trace the lengthened train and silhouettes whirling of the iron rail through deep cuttings, over tony bridges, lost in the woods, and stand again in the ocean of the glories of the North and East—the square turret of the Soldiers Home, undeniably memorable as the one favorite retreat of the martyred President; we catch a glimpse of rock-bound Rock Creek, whose course we follow, and then to the tower to tower to 1776, over the towers and roofs of Howard University to Silver Spring, the magnificent suburban retreat of the Blairs, to describe whose beauties and charms bits of scenery would require a volume.

Just as we are about to "ascend" Mariner would say, "about a pint, or a pint 'o' harp" over the wooded heights of Meridian Hill, the straggling buildings of Columbian University, and across the hills the spires of Mt. Pleasant, most familiar now the location of an immense Hospital during the war, one can just discern the outlines of Fort Stevens, now dismantled and almost obliterated, before whose walls the gallant Parrot will 20,000 men, and the iron-clad gun-boats of July, 1863, and although repudiated managed to frightening every non-combatant in Washington. Pursuing the line of vision still further to the west, by the road and sombre-looking grounds of Kalorama, the home of the widow, poor, displaced statesman, patriot, and wit, by that little emerald Isle called Arlington, the former house of the Masons, senators, governors, aubasadors and statesmen all, over which the roof and spires of Georgetown, the name of the heart, the name of the mother, of our national gratitude, the eye will rest in cool relief upon the tilled and verdant groves of Arlington, the east front of whose mansion is clearly visible against the sky, the back-garden of the residence of the former house of W. H. Curtis, the adopted son of Gen. Washington, and later of Gen. R. E. Lee, his son-in-law, are grouped the graves of nearly 16,000 of the nation's dead, most of whom fell in the campaign through Virginia. Vastly to the right of Arlington, the proud waving flag denotes the location of Fort Whipple and to the left is seen the turreted flag of Fairfax Seminary. Directly over the hill, the patriotic eye is drawn to the residence of Calvert Hall, Hall's Crossing, all familiar names to the soldier boys of '61. Most of the chain of forts which but ten years ago constituted the Defences of Washington, 68 in number, have been removed, 12000 feet of manted and fast becoming a portion of our natural element. Still their ruins may yet be seen on every eminence around the city, and the memory hunter may yet be rewarded for his labor by finding the spot by the discovery of battle-mus and cartridges, or some item of the thousand and one useful and useless appendages of camp life.

Most persons are of course in all the scenes before us, of course, ever glad to see Potomac, which can be traced by a long and winding path, from the wharves of Georgetown, where crossed by the Aqueduct bridge, through and under the famous Long Bridge sweeping in wide meanders to the head of the Potowmack, where Alexandria, that little group just on the point to the South, conceals the buildings and gun-park of the Arsenal, a most glorious retreat and favorite promenade during the summer months, and the scene of execution of the condemned. In the tragedy of the 13th of April, 1865, the jutting projection of land still further down on the Maryland side, is Glebe Point, important cavalry depot in '62-'3, from whence the troops in the field were accustomed to sweep the river, and the fortifications of the rebels, who had held it but indistinctly seen from our post of observation, still its church-towers and spires and tall chimneys, stand out against the clear sky and denote its presence.

The graduating exercises of the North High School of Weymouth, took place on Thursday of last week, in the North Church, the graduates being Miss Emma F. Ander, Miss Emma W. Sherman, Miss S. Lizzie Richards, Miss Anna E. Loud, Miss Josephine A. Raymond, Miss Annie M. Briggs, Masters Geo. F. White and Amasa H. Smith.

The church was elegantly decorated with flowers under direction of the lady Assistant Teacher, Miss Lewiston, and the programme of exercises, under the charge of Mr. Geo. W. Shaw, the Principal, gave general satisfaction.

Rev. Mr. Rockwood, of the School Committee, made some excellent and encouraging remarks, in presenting the diplomas to the graduates.

The exercises were closed after a few remarks by the Hon. James Humphrey, the Mayor of Boston, of the Board of Aldermen, the home of the Garrison, a very wifely widow, long red front of Providence Hospital, the broad streets, long low work-shops and tall chimneys of the Navy Yard. But most cool, most interesting of all, just on the edge of the western hills, the rugged, blue labelled training, the rugged, torn of the Blue Ridge Mountains. On a cool retreat among their fastnesses, drinking from crystal springs, breathing the strong pure mountain air, drifting at the caprice of the breezes, where the quiet interest not, where the heeler trial is yet unheard of and a Third Term long bear frightened none; where gold and currency are both equal in the bath great and small, where the money muscle magnifies not in the land. In fact, why not a temporary lodge in some vast wilderness, but then after all, cavea.

LOCAL NEWS.

MARSHFIELD.—The rush to the Brant Rock watering-place on Monday was unprecedented in the annals of that salubrious locality. The road was alive with teams through the day, and the resources of the hotels and stables were severely taxed. The popularity of Brant Point increases year by year, especially since the opening of the Duxbury and Cohasset Railroad, whereby visitors have easy access to this point, at moderate cost. Our readers who desire a quiet, cool retreat at the seashore, will do well to step into the comfortable cars of the O. C. R. R., at 8 1/2 A. M., 3 1/2 P. M., and .50 P. M., from Boston, and after an hour and a half of riding through the pleasant towns of the South Shore, they can find a "safe retreat from the summer's heat," at slight expense, the terms of board at the Point hotels being much lower than at places nearer the city. Fine yachts are always in readiness to carry parties to the fishing grounds or for pleasure sailing, while the less venturesome, with rod in hand, can fish from the jutting point of rocks with safety.

CASPIAN.—A party of boys belonging in Weymouth indulged in a sail down river Independence Day, and on their return through the draw of the Point bridge the mast came in contact with the bridge, capsizing the boat. One of the boys became entangled in the rigging and was in danger of drowning, but had the presence of mind to reach down and remove the incumbrances from his feet. The boys all escaped with a ducking.

LIGHTNING damaged the house of Mr. W. T. Burrell, at Weymouth Landing, last Monday morning, the casing of a bay window being partially demolished and glass broken, while the gilding of picture frames and paper on the walls was badly tarnished. The bldg passed through the side of the house in its exit, tearing off clapboards and splintering the boarding. The stable and shed were also struck, with slight damage.

The house of Widow Longden, on Mt. Pleasant, was also considerably damaged during the same tempest, but fortunately none of the occupants were injured in either case.

The dwelling-house of Mr. F. Shaw, near the South Weymouth depot, also sustained some damage from the same cause, the chimney being thrown down, and the house riddled in various parts. No injury was done to the occupants.

LEFT DEATH.—A little boy who participated in the excursion of poor children from Boston to Silver Lake, last Tuesday, on the return of the train was left behind at South Weymouth, and the fact being made known to Sup't Kendrick of the O. C. R. R., he telegraphed to the railroad agent at South Weymouth to take care of the boy for the night, the request being carried out in the most hospitable manner, and the boy was returned to the city next morning, in good condition.

REGATTA.—Capt. S. F. Whitmarsh's sloop, Nellie, of Weymouth, was a constant in the Postage-Last Monday, making an intermediate time between the winning boats and the "tubs."

SOUTH SHORE RAILROAD.—The annual meeting of this Corporation was held Tuesday, and the following gentlemen were elected Directors for the ensuing year—Onslow Stearns, Oliver Ames, Alonzo Crocker, Francis B. Hayes, Ephraim U. Winslow. Charles F. Choate was elected Clerk of the Corporation.

FRUIT AND FLOWERS for the Boston Hospital may be sent on Wednesday afternoon and evening of next week, to the house of Miss Jane Clapp, Front Street.

ESCAPE FROM INJURY.—A young son of Mr. J. R. Lovell, of East Weymouth, while his father was pitching seaweed into a hen-house last Monday, ran before him suddenly, and the tines of the fork clasped each side of the boy's neck, the boy narrowly escaping fatal injury.

HIGH SCHOOL EXAMINATIONS.—Scholars holding the following numbers passed the examination and are admitted to the High School—1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 7, 9, 10, 13, 14, 16, 19, 22, 23, 24, 25, 30, 34, 39, 41, 42, 44, 46, 47, 49, 51, 53, 55, 56, 57, 59, 60, 62, 63, 66, 67, 70, 73, 74, 75. A. G. Lewis, Sup't of Schools.

But most cool, most interesting

North Weymouth.

The citizens of North Weymouth celebrated the "Glorious fifth" last Monday by a parade of "Ye Antiques and Horribles" under the chief marshalship of Maj. F. Ricknell. The procession formed according to orders at 4:37 A. M. on Sea St., the right resting on North and moved shortly before five, through the principal streets of Ninth and East Weymouth. The first to appear was a platoon of police consisting of one next rank, "Sirloin's" Weymouth Band, who appeared for the first time in their new and gorgeous (2) uniform. In the procession was a representation of the Steamer Massasoit with all the paraphernalia of a modern Steamship, the steam gauge indicating a pressure of 10000 lbs.

Among other good hits was a wagon containing a man and woman (2) the man holding a young child and feeling it with a 1 1/2 inch rubber tube from a carboy containing about five gallons of soothing syrup.

The wagon was labelled "30 o'clock in the morning." The president and directors of the National Clam Bank of No. Weymouth honored the party with their presence, in a splendid barouche drawn by a team of four horses.

The route of the day occupied a prominent position in the procession on foot.

The orator of the day occupied a prominent position in the procession on foot. There were many other excellent features in the procession, but time and space will not admit of mentioning them.

The route of the procession, which was started at 6 A. M., was from the Park through Pleasant and Main Streets, countermarching to the Depot and Columbian Square, where the Chief Marshal was graciously presented with a "bucket of flowers" by a resident, the gift being delivered with an address which drew a ludicrous comparison between the gallant commander and the honest horses.

Death—Its Business Side.

NO. II.

Having taken the prerequisite legal measures you "go to a probate". The court is convened in a room about one-half large enough to contain the people in attendance. In the center of the room is a table at which the judge, the register and several justices are seated. These latter supervisors of the public peace have each a pocket full of legal documents and labor under the impression that the judge is in duty bound to hear their case first. So you quietly bide your time, improving meanwhile the small measure of standing room squeezed out for you. You cannot fail to recognize the beauties of Democratic uprightness; with the exceptions mentioned everybody stands. Even the mercury stands at 95° in the shade, produced by the blinds being closed on account of one of the functionaries having weak eyes, while the windows are kept shut to avoid a draught.

At last you are beckoned to elbow your way to the front and make your business known. You deliver up the paper which is the last will and testament of your nearest and dearest relative, recalling, as you do so, the tearful tenderness of provident care with which were planned its safe provision for each member of the family fold. The judge takes the instrument and unfolds it as hastily and indifferently as if it were a circus show bill. "Are your witnesses here?" You call them forward and his honor, ordering their Heavenward, proceeds to invoke for them the help of almighty power to enable them to do what they have done all their lives without infinite assistance, viz.—to tell the truth. Pointing to the names subscribed to the document he asks each witness, "Do you recognize your signature there?" He puts this question in the most solemn manner, having apparently not the remotest sense of the ludicrousness of commanding the aid of omnipotence to enable a person to recognize his own autograph. But possibly, the chirography of the legal fraternity is such that nothing less than by divine inspiration could they decipher their own hand-writing, and the conclusion is that every one else writes as cabalistically.

"Was the testator, according to the best of your judgment, at the time he signed this will, in his right mind?" An affirmative answer being given the necessary papers are made out and handed you, the judge not even seeming to care whether you and your witnesses are crazy or not. A spectator unfamiliar with the ways of law would infer from the proceedings that the judge had recently been advised of the demise of a large number of inmates of some insane asylum and cautioned to be on the watch for the presentation of their wills duly signed and sealed. Now in the name of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, and in the name of common sense, it may not be permitted to ask if there is no better way to substantiate a will in court than through disowning the dead and insulting the living, by the shameful inquiry, in substance, "Was the deceased at the time when he wrote, or directed, and signed this, the most important document of a life time, a lunatic?" WEEKLY GAZETTE AND REPORTER.

[Correspondence of the Gazette.]

LETTER FROM WASHINGTON.
THE GENERAL OF THE ARMY AND HIS PREDCESSORS. WILKINSON, SCOTT, ETC.
AL.

WASHINGTON, July 16th, 1875.

The interest growing out of the publication of General Sherman's book does not seem to date with his rising of rank, but, probably, good an occasion as any for us to glance at the General as an individual, and through him to the high position he occupies.

Briefly, then, Gen. Sherman is a most singular and decidedly original character, the liberal and frank friend of his predecessors and more fortunate comrade, General Grant; the one phlegmatic, cool, observant, calculating and non-committal; the other nervous, outspoken, hasty, impulsive and communicative. What the one considers as too much, the other thinks too little.

Both are disposed to imitate the other, and retain with that statement to the President, who appointed Scott on the instant.

Scott has it so far, though to his intense discomfiture, Gen. Taylor distanced him for Vice-Presidency, and Gen. Grant, for Consul-General in Mexico, before the victory of Grant.

Gen. Scott was in 1861, having held his post over twenty years. The subsequent reverses and triumphs of McClellan, Burnside and Grant, are of too recent occurrence to warrant a recital.

CARLTON.

LOCAL NEWS.

THE RUST to the Vineyard by the P. M. train from Boston to Woods Hole, last Saturday, was very gratifying to the hotel proprietors at this famous resort, and "bluffing," "hopping," etc., in and around the Sea View, was indulged with accustomed vigor by the guests who filled its spacious apartments and lodging rooms.

The less pretentious and quieter portion of the visitors put themselves under the charge of the hosts of the Central House, Messrs. Fuller & Co., where they found comfortable accommodation, while the less expensive in action, were managed to secure the favor of the Colonymen of the 18th Infantry, and thus was purchased for the Union cause.

Contrast this with the conduct of Gen. Grant, who won the confidence of the Neglectful and brester, and came into action, when

Gen. Sherman was bargaining for the terms upon which he might be called to hasten to the defense of his country.

How different the course of Gen. Grant at Bull Run, and thence transferred to the Western Army, his rise, through the magnanimity and generosity of Gen. Grant, whom he now speaks so slightly of, was rapid, and his record will follow out the history of the war.

His position is now, as it has always been, an anomalous one. That of an officer ranking above a Field Marshal of Europe, and with a salary of nearly 20,000 a year, besides a staff of 150 men and a Col. of Cavalry, and a command of no less than 22,000 men! And an enemy, there ever was, so small and so brave an army in the world? Scattered over an immense Empire, from Maine to California; guarding frontier of 400 miles, of 4,000 more, watching well disposed Indians, and fighting hostile ones; escorting supply trains and Revenue Collectors; guarding railroad lines and prospecting miners; exploring the Yellow Stone, the Mississippi, the Ohio, the rivers, inlets, outlets of the southwest; building quarters, digging wells and ditches, planting telegraph poles and running preliminary surveys, and in short performing a general utility business upon the frontier stage.

Twenty-four thousand men, Gen. Sherman, think, knowing how many men he commands today, may wake in the morning and find he has lost a half dozen regiments during the night by legislation.

It would be a difficult task to compare the present Commander-in-Chief with any of his predecessors, or even with himself.

Mr. C. M. Harlow has opened the Pavilion on the Bluffs, and having secured the assistance of Mr. Damon, the well known caterer of Marshfield, is furnishing delicious ice cream and other luxuries for families and transient visitors.

PERSONAL.—Mr. and Mrs. James Torrey, of North Weymouth, are sojourning at Congress Hall, Saratoga.

The learned Patriot states that Rev.

Mr. Halliday and wife, and Mr. Charles Torrey, of Weymouth, have taken up their quarters for a month or so, in Mrs.

Poly Stetson's house, in that village.

a complimentary dinner was served to the musicians in the saloon by Mr. Folson, the lessee of the Grove.

EXCURSION.—The annual excursion of the North Weymouth Social Choir in the Atlantic House, Nantasket Beach, occurs on Thursday, July 29th. Arrangements will be made as usual for the entertainment of guests, and all members of the Choir and friends who have previously participated in the excursions, are invited to attend.

REAL ESTATE.—Joseph Adams has sold to Henry Hunt the Hunt's Hill estate on Weymouth river, comprising 12 acres.

IN TOWN.—Rev. Mr. Lloyd, former Rector of Trinity church, Weymouth, and who is now Rector of the Episcopal church in Millard, was in town last Monday, a former parishioner, who was quite ill, desiring to receive spiritual ministrations from her former pastor, whom she highly esteemed and revered.

NOTHARY.—Hon. Samuel Prince Loud, a native of Weymouth, and who for many years filled important public positions in this county and State, died at Dorchester, July 11, at the advanced age of 92 years and 4 months. In a sketch of the life of the deceased, contributed to the Norfolk County Gazette by Hon. Samuel B. Noyes, it is stated that he was one of the most respected men in public and in private life. He was a graduate of Brown University, in the same class with Hon. Judge Theron Metcalf, now living and nearly 91 years of age. Mr. Loud studied law in the office of John Q. Adams, and began the practice of law in Dorchester in 1809, living there in the same house from that time until his death.

He was chosen to many important offices, which he filled with fidelity and unselfish devotion. As Representative from the town of Dorchester, as Senator for Norfolk County, in the Executive Council, as Chairman of the Board of County Commissioners, those now living who met with him in these capacities will respond to the estimate of the ability, patience and sound, practical wisdom he manifested in the administration of the difficult and onerous duties of these offices. He was a good lawyer, and was soon singled out by the people of this county as the man to whom their common interests were to be confided.

In all his acts he was so preeminent, resolute, prudent and sound, so sensible and so accurate in his judgment, that he seemed never to be wrong, while his courtesy and amenities of manner toward all, and his evenness of disposition, were wonderful. In all his actions there was so evident a desire to be just that his influence over his fellow townsmen was complete.

It is not easy to realize that the life of Mr. Loud began before the organization of the present county of Norfolk. At his death he was the oldest man in Dorchester, and through his long life he has been honored and beloved throughout the whole county. The memory of his virtues and his bright example of private excellence, will live through all coming time, in that immortality that blooms before the grave.

FARM, GARDEN AND HOUSEHOLD

Remedies for Cabbage Worms.

Hollesboro, lime, salt and similar substances have been used with varied success for the destruction of cabbage worms. It is now stated that bran, buckwheat flour and arrowroot powder, when any other remedies have been tried, bran is simply duster over the infested cabbages as soon as the worms make their appearance. If the worms are very thick, about a handful of bran is required to each cabbage head, and sometimes it is necessary to add a dredge of bran sufficient for an acre. Lime must be applied when the worms are scarce. When they are full-grown or very strong, it does not appear to affect them. The buckwheat is sifted upon them by means of sieve in the evening or in the morning—when the dew is on the plants. If one applies this dose, then, in the second season, that same should be done, fine Indian meal or any other pulverulent farinaceous substance would have the same effect—American Gardener.

Cucumber Fruit.

The fruit should be perfectly fresh, and the sooner it is eaten after it is taken from the tree or vine, the better. In a small quantity, say half a dozen squares, is cooked at one time, the color of the fruit and the uniformity of the cooking will be better than if a larger quantity is attempted. This is the necessity of using a quantity of sugar in a gross of cases. The fruit will keep just as well as any, and is far more grateful to a healthy appetite. Glass and a screw ring give best satisfaction, as they can be sealed and mashed in a moment's time. As for the process, when the fruit is done, pour it scalding hot into the cans, let them remain untouched for twenty minutes, till the scalding fruit is put in it. Turn the cans, after screwing them up tightly, bottom side up, and if no syrup seeps out, no air can get in. When cold set them away in a dark, cool closet.

Pearl Buttons.

For the benefit of those who do not wish to use paraffine wax, nor any means of destroying the bugs, gather the vines which you consider most effective, and when I have found very effective. Bend over the vine with the hand, extended so as to expose the entire under surface and the leaves on all sides, and where the eggs are found deposited in clusters of from ten to fifty, remove them with the leaf and burn them. To each cluster of a bright orange color, and easily可見, lay eggs and die. These eggs, being laid in the fall late, do not hatch till spring, and thus come many myriads of them as now. But one might imagine their leader, if they have one, weeping like another Xerxes at the morrow, and his followers forsooth, and easily可見, think that they must be all hatched out West in October, and all perish during the winter. This lot will come to an end soon after laying its eggs. It seems to be an error about their being destroyed by the red parasites; as Mark Twain would say, they rather like them! It is much easier to destroy forty-five eggs on a leaf than to destroy the same number of insects, and it is done in about the same time it would take to apply an article that many do not like to use—S. N. Phelps, New York.

Line Hawk for Bugs.

A gentleman who is quite a chicken fancier says he has tried the tan and turpentine remedy, but thinks he has killed with it more chickens than he has cured; that the method of extracting the worm or worms from the chicken wire is not always to be relied on; that the worm is a ready infester and instantaneous. Put dry snakeweed lime into a box, and let it be so stirred as to catch all the worms in the chicken, and cover with a piece of carpet. Let the chicken be in from half a minute to a minute, then bring it to life again, and it will be safe to throw out the worms. The lime is very severe on the eyes, and it is well to wipe off what remains about them, but it does no permanent injury.

To Keep Moths from Furniture.

On a rainy day, on a bright sunny day, take it out of doors, remove the bottoms from the chairs, if they can be removed, and give the cushions a good switching with long pliable switches that the dust is removed. Then with a brush go all over them thoroughly. While the cushions are being cleaned give the frames a coat of varnish. Let the furniture remain in the sun now and all day. Thus writes a Kansas housekeeper, who has proven the remedy to be effective. —New York Sun.

Blots on Linen.

One friend, the insect-eating birds, have been ruthlessly destroyed in all parts of the country, and a war of extermination is still going on in communities where we might expect better things. These are but a small number of the causes which might be named, all working together in giving the husbandman, and bringing disastrous results where good would come if an opposite course had been pursued.—New York Sun.

To Get Rid of Ants.

Lay old bones or sponge saturated with molasses and water where they most do congregate, taking away everything else also from that locality. When the bones or sponges with the water give them a bath in scalding water. This remedy is tedious, but it is effective. If any one can give a better a Detroit lady will be very glad to have it.

Brussels Love Story.

There is a very pretty love story told in connection with the introduction of the manufacture of fine lace from Brussels. A poor young girl, named Gertrude, was dying for love of a young man, whose wealth precluded all hopes of marriage. One night as she sat weeping, a fair lady entered her cottage, without saying a word, placed her hat upon the floor, and the instant she did so, the hat was filled with thread. The lady then, with perfect silence, showed her how to work the bobbin, and how to make all sorts of delicate patterns and complicated stitches. As daylight approached, the maiden had learned the art, and the mysterious visitor disappeared. The price of the maid's skill was the love of the young man, who was able to marry the object of her love. Many years after, while living in luxury, with her numerous family about her, she was startled by the mysterious lady entering her comfortable house—this time not silent, but looking stern. She said "I never enjoy a quiet and comfort, while without any fame and trouble." I helped you, have not helped your neighbors. The angels weep for you, and turn away their faces." So the next day Gertrude went forth with her cushion and bobbin in her hand, and going from cottage to cottage, she offered to teach the art she had so mysteriously learned. So they all became rich, and their country also.

The Crops in Russia.

The official report of the state of the crops in Russia, published by the ministry of agriculture at St. Petersburg, is very favorable. In the governments of Clazofor, Poltava, Toma and the district on the coast of the Black sea the winter sowings are in very good condition, and equally good accounts are received from Bessarabia. In the governments of Poltava and Ekaterinoslav, where the crops were at first in a very bad condition, they have completely recovered under the influence of favorable weather. Similar accounts have been received from the Don and Volga districts.

THE FLIGHT OF THE LOCUSTS.

An interesting Description of the Most Terrible Pest—Locusts are Lesser.

A correspondent of the Chicago Tribune writes from Oregon, Holt county, Mo., as follows: To give you some idea of the locust plague, let me describe briefly their flight. Eleven days ago they began to pass here over us. They now go to rise up above the horizon at noon, and by ten-thirty are nearly all gone, and they go to rise again, which drives them. The wind which drives them, the worms are very thick, about a handful of bran is required to each cabbage head, and sometimes it is necessary to add a dredge of bran sufficient for an acre. Lime must be applied when the worms are scarce. When they are full-grown or very strong, it does not appear to affect them. The buckwheat is sifted upon them by means of sieve in the evening or in the morning—when the dew is on the plants. If one applies this dose, then, in the second season, that same should be done, fine Indian meal or any other pulverulent farinaceous substance would have the same effect—American Gardener.

The worms which caused such a havoc a few years ago, has this year appeared in immense numbers in Maine, and the fruit crops will be very small in consequence. From the time the worms hatch, they crawl up to the surface, devouring the leaves as they go. Sometimes the line of battle is broken for several miles, in other places the invaders march in columns of varying width, leaving strips of country untouched, or visited only by n small skirmishes or stragglers.

The worst depredation of the worms is in the northern part of Oxford county and in Franklin county. There the line of march was unbroken, and no efforts of the farmers could stay their progress or appreciably diminish their numbers. In Pownal, Montpelier town, and Franklin plantation the crop of the worm was about exhausted, as not nearly so many had passed down the hill as were when swarming. They covered houses which lay in their path so densely that one could not tell the material of which the houses were built. Farm houses of a dazzling white color, which abound in New England—were reduced to a dull brown, without any trace of paint visible from ridgepole to foundation. The worm crawled down from them, fastened to long poles, and buried them in trenches; but millions came to supply their places. Farmers plowed trenches around their orchards, finding that the worms could not crawl up them, the yielding loam giving way under their feet. The next morning the trenches would be filled with a writhing mass, but the main body of the army would have passed over the backs of their imprisoned comrades. The worm's progress and roadway would be entirely covered by them, and in one instance a train of cars on the Grand Trunk railway was stopped by them all the way between a crowd of negroes and white men, at Vickburg, Miss., two negroes and another fatally shot—Lizzie Schmidt, seven years ago, was outraged and killed near O'Fallon, Ill. Joseph Hogan was arrested in East St. Louis on suspicion of committing the crime.

The Wisconsin Republican Convention nominated Harrison Lindstrom, of Milwaukee, for governor to sent out to the citizens of the prairie states by a tornado, near Menasha, Minn., which road rather "fisty." We are told, among other things, that a pine tree two inches square was driven into an elm tree with such force that it was fairly buried in the living wood. A woman, Mrs. Patrick Tully, was carried a distance of one mile, clear across the prairie, and deposited on the ground near her home, and attempted to bury her half-buried, but did not succeed. Then he numbered his little boy, a child eight months old, and buried the two ladies in a hole. The authorities have not caught the wretch as yet.... The one hundred and twentieth anniversary of the battle of the Breyne was generally celebrated by the Orangemen throughout the country by indulging in picnics. The only disturbance reported was at Wrentham, Mass., where a party of a dozen Orangemen with their ladies were assaulted by a mob of several hundred and many stones thrown at them. The little party sought the protection of the police, and under the escort of the mayor and a squad of other officials started for their homes. The men were unharmed, and again attacked them with clubs, stones, and other missiles, until every one of the party except the priest were injured. Finally, as the mob made another onslaught with the cry of "Kill the Orangemen," the latter drove them off with a roar of fire from their rifles, and the priest was unharmed.

WEEKLY GAZETTE AND REPORTER

FRIDAY, JULY 30, 1875.

(Correspondence of the Gazette.)
LETTER FROM WASHINGTON,
THE CAPITAL IN SUMMER.—A STRUGGLE
THROUGH THE BOTANICAL GARDENS.

Washington, July 21, 1875.

With some little experience in the way of wandering in other cities with the object of getting the most beautiful in nature, we can understandly affirm that Washington presents to resident and visitor a more beautiful and general cultivation arrangement of the vegetable kingdom than that other open air city affords. The summer scene Washington is perfect in its beauty of atmosphere and skies, and verdant sweep of lawns, "never to leave a grateful remembrance," flowers and flowers, performed in shades and colors, the figure duplicate in every respect on the other side; one can but wonder at the remarkable degree of perfection the modern experimental horticulture has been brought, and how plant life is nature in the hands of those who have learned how to cultivate it.

On the north-west, and south fronts of the Botanical Department, one finds thousand upon thousands of roses in their season, scarlet geraniums, petunias, etc., verbenas, covering beds higher than thirty feet in diameter, the contrasting mass of brilliant red and color.
